

I joined the Patreon in early 2021 and have been a fan of the band since 2020. While I may not have been a fan for as long as many others, the impact they've had on me can't be understated. Anti-Flag as a band inspired me to write punk rock music and have overall been a massive influence on my own band. I've met the band a couple times and have even had personal conversations with Justin specifically about my music and what constructive criticisms he may have. Needless to say, my band's direction has drastically shifted as I want no association with the likes of him or anyone like him. It was definitely an identity crisis for my band and I still have trouble with the creative process. Ultimately, I would like to move on and focus hard on creating an environment in my local music scene where this kind of shit isn't tolerated in any degree. I stand with the victims who have come forward with their experience of these monstrous acts.

To everyone who has come forward:

As a SA survivor myself, I hope to see your strength and bravery serve as a beacon to all who feel that their voices have been taken. May your words never fall to the wayside again. You are loved, you are important, you are BELIEVED.

Anonymous